

A Mayerle Minute...

Dear *||*,

I got into town tonight after eight hours on snowy roads. Tomorrow I meet with a young missionary couple and together we will prayerfully develop a plan for re-engaging in ministry.

A couple months ago this young man, who had been carrying significant ministry responsibility, ‘fell of the cliff’ as one Christian author has described burn-out. He was out of gas and he had to step back from ministry for a bit. Bev and I have been keeping in touch with both he and his wife and the Lord has been at work.

By God’s power and grace, two months later we are meeting to begin mapping out the road to full re-engagement in ministry.

As I drove and prayed I was reminded of the verses in James 1 “if any of you lacks wisdom, he should ask God, who gives generously to all without finding fault, and it will be given to him.”

I am writing this quick Mayerle Minute to ask you to pray with us tomorrow – Monday, March 2. Pray for heavenly wisdom. There is no prescribed formula for this process. Every situation is different. It needs to be guided by the Word of Truth and the Spirit of God.

Thank you for praying!

I will be getting you an update later this week and giving you some prayer requests because there is more coaching in the not-to-distant future with another ministry worker who is dealing with a similar situation.

I trust you are seeing God at work in you and around you as you live in relationship with Him. Blessings.
